

What's in the Meat?

"What's in the Meat" is a bimonthly article that answers questions and concerns related to meat production, submitted by readers, in the industry. This week, the focus is on

Under what conditions are beef cattle raised?

(Response by the operator of a beef cattle operation)

(Photo of beef cattle herd)

Is the process humane?

(Response by a manager of a processing facility)

"We know that consumers are concerned and have questions about how and where their food is raised and where it comes from."

- Michael Kelsey, executive vice president, Nebraska Cattlemen's Association

Responses come from those who live and work in the beef industry.

What is the difference between grass-fed and organic beef?

(Response by the operator of a beef cattle operation)

(Photo of various meat cuts)

Does beef raise cholesterol?

(Response by a nutritionist)